NEGOTIATIONS

INTERVENTION

USSR Moscow's position on the question of negotiations remains unchanged.

The Soviet Union's recent public expressions of support for the DRV have given no indication of any shift in Moscow's position.

China The Chinese continue to assert that there can be no negotiated settlement of the Vietnam question except on the Communist terms.

Peking's continued public pledges of support for the Vietnamese continue to imply that it is the US rather than China which will initiate a Sino-US war.

Cont'd basis for any negotiated solution to the war. In recent weeks Hanoi propaganda has played up the support its position has received from meetings connected with the Tri-continental Congress week of solidarity with Vietnam and the statement on Vietnam at the Soviet Party Congress.

The Liberation Front's position on bringing the war to a negotiated solution has not deviated in the past two weeks from its five point statement issued on 22 March 1965.

INTERVENTION

While acknowledging these offers, Hanoi has never publicly accepted them nor claimed such volunteers are needed.

The Liberation Front made no significant statements on the subject of intervention during the past two weeks.

13 March 66: In a Pravda editorial entitled "Militant Solidarity" Moscow reiterated its public claim that, "The Soviet Union is carrying out its international duty by continuing to render the Vietnamese people all types of support and aid in the struggle against US imperialism's aggression."		Moscow's public expressions of support for the DRV remain unchanged.
15 March 66: Radio Moscow to China stated, "the Soviet Union has helped and is still giving necessary aid to the DRV in order to strengthen its defense capability. In the past year because the US imperialists extended their aggression, the Soviet Union has especially increased its aid to the DRV to strengthen its defense capability." It concluded that, "the Soviet Union fulfills its internationalist duty and will continue to help the DRV strengthen its defense capability and rebuff aggression."

These statements probably reflect Chinese propaganda charges that the US "aggressors" are plotting an attack on China. They may be intended to lend credibility to Peking's propaganda and in this way help generate deterrent political pressure against US military escalation. There is no evidence of the extensive activity

18 March 66: At a Peking rally commemorating the 16th anniversary of the "19 March Vietnam day of struggle against US imperialism" and the "week of solidarity with the Vietnamese people," Vice Chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress Kuo Mo-jo declared that "The 650 million people of China are prepared. 15 March 66: A Hanoi international broadcast on Chinese support for the DRV noted that many letters from Chinese people "express their readiness to go to Vietnam to fight beside the brother Vietnamese people against the US aggressors."		Hanoi propaganda has been relatively silent on the subject of intervention for some months. This reference is similar to many others broadcast in the past and does not suggest that the DRV plans to implement the threat in the foreseeable future.
22 March 66: A Hanoi VNA broadcast on the occasion of the first anniversary of the 22 March 1965 five-point statement of the NFLSV noted that "A movement has surged up in the five continents to volunteer to go to South Vietnam and fight against the US imperialist aggressors."		The mention of volunteers for Vietnam in the context of the first anniversary of the Front statement on a settlement of the war does not appear to increase the threat of possible intervention. Rather, it appears as part of Hanoi's effort to demonstrate that the Front enjoys world wide support.

This is consistent with Mos-25X1
cow's response to similar peace feelers from other nationals. The Soviets have made it clear they will not encourage such efforts unless asked to do so by the North Vietnamese leadership
or when Moscow believes there is a clear chance that its efforts will be successful.

Moscow's public position on this question has not changed.

13 March 66: In a Pravda
editorial the Soviets repeated their public position
on the question of a Vietnamese settlement, stating "There is a correct basis for a solution of the Vietnam conflict," adding, "the Soviet Union is in full agreement with the position of the DRV and the NFLSV on the question of settling the conflict."

29 March 66: According to the TASS Summary Soviet party chief Brezhnev stated in his speech
before the CPSU Congress that,
"The Soviet Union stands for a settlement of the Vietnamese problem on the basis set forth by the DRV government and the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front."

This is a reiteration of Moscow's familiar public position on the question of a settlement in Vietnam.

The article went on to list all previous efforts by the Yugoslavs to promote peace talks and condemned them with equal vigor. []

This attack on Tito once again demonstrates Hanoi's irritation at the efforts by third parties to establish some initiative on settling the war. In Hanoi's view, none of these initiatives have been close enough to the Vietnamese Communist terms for ending the conflict. This latest attack was provoked by Western press reports that Yugoslav Premier Stambolic was touring a number of Asian 21 March 66: According to Western press reports Vo Cong Trung, a member of the Liberation Front's representation in Algiers rejected a recent peace call by UN Secretary General U Thant and emphatically denied that in recent conversations with leftist British MP Lord Brockway he had welcomed the 25X1 statement. 		Western press reporters have several times in the past detected what they claimed to be some softening in the Front position as voiced by one of its spokesman. These alleged changes in the Front's position have usually been denied by the Front spokesman to whom they were attributed.
